ICFAI CDAC take up Joint project on Kokborok

Mr. S.K. Chowdhury, Vice-Chancellor of ICFAI University, today announced that ICFAI CDAC, in collaboration with CDAC, would be taking up a joint project on Kokborok. The project aims to develop a comprehensive framework for the language, including the development of a Kokborok dictionary, a language processing system, and the creation of a Kokborok-English translator. The project is expected to be completed within the next two years.

The announcement was made during a meeting with representatives of the Kokborok community and government officials. Mr. Chowdhury stated that the project was an important step towards the preservation and promotion of Kokborok, a language spoken by a small community in Tripura.

The project is being funded by the Government of India and is expected to benefit not only the Kokborok community but also the wider Tripura region. The dictionary and language processing system will be made available online, providing access to the language for researchers and language learners.

Mr. Chowdhury expressed his hope that the project would help in the development of the language and promote cultural diversity in the region. He also highlighted the importance of language preservation in the digital age, where languages are at risk of being lost.

The project is expected to create employment opportunities for the Kokborok community and contribute to the economic development of the region. It is also hoped that the project will help in the preservation of cultural heritage and promote intercultural dialogue.

The announcement was met with enthusiasm by the Kokborok community, who thanked the ICFAI University and CDAC for their efforts in preserving the language. They expressed their hope that the project would be successful and hoped that the language would continue to be spoken for generations to come.

The project is expected to be a significant step towards the preservation of Kokborok and will contribute to the development of the region.
